A Reason to Celebrate

Today the Fox River Valley is a wintering site for hundreds of eagles. This was not always so. Due to DDT and contaminants such as PCBs and other heavy metals, the eagle population along the Fox River became nonexistent. Officially, the first wintering eagle along the Fox was observed in 1982 during a DNR mid-winter waterfowl survey. Since that time, the number of over-wintering and resident birds has increased tremendously due to improved habitat and removal of contaminants within the river.

The bald eagle is a symbol of the improved health of the Fox River waterway and its communities. Elements affected by this revival include health of its citizens, tourism, job creation and appreciation of local history. These are reasons to celebrate Eagle Days Along the Fox.

Human presence can stress eagles, causing them to expend energy needed for survival. Please follow these viewing tips:

- ◆ Avoid making loud noises such as shouting, slamming vehicle doors or blowing the horn.
- ◆ Observe from a comfortable distance using binoculars or spotting scopes.
- ◆ When taking pictures use common sense to avoid disturbing eagles.

While most of the viewing sites shown on the map are public, some are private. Thank you for respecting all properties.
